The evening was marked by many earnes scussions and strong expressions regardng some of the resolutions proposed. The meeting was well attended, and all present entered into the discussions with a vim said to have never before been exhibited at any meeting of the association. read and approved.

The association approved the extension of Fourteenth Street to Spring Road as set forth in House bill No. 7950. "The next extension of this street," the association declared, "would in every way benefit the communities of Mount Pleasant and Columbia Heights besides adding greatly to the value and attractiveness of the property in that vicinity."

The association, after a long discussion, in which most of the members took part, resolved that the organization of a com-Office. This report is printed upon a chart illustrating the direction and the velocity of the various high winds which have swept the North Atlantic in the last month and a half. Derelicts, icebergs, and loating masses of wreckage reported to the hydrographic officers in that time are also wrecks, which mariners dread. Not an iceberg was sighted in February, although a little field of ice was reported near the 50th meridian, latitude 48 north. There was also very little fog last month.

The high winds which prevailed in the last six weeks, however, more than made up for the absence of ice and fog, and the list of marine casualities is formidable. The month of March is not likely to be any improvement in the matter of weather if the following forecast of the Hydrographic Office may be taken as an authority:

"Forecast for March—Frequent gales north of the 25th parallel, along the trans-Atlantic routes, occasionally from the eastern quadrants. Gales to the north of the routes less frequent than during January and February; more frequent south of latitude 40 north. Occasional fog north of the trans-Atlantic routes. Ice on and near the Grand Banks."

Many of the highest gales in February and the latter part of January occurred along the North Atlantic coast. A few of these storms, however, turned to the east-ward in the vicinity of Verefrended and What was first thought to be an insig-nificant matter next came before the meet-ing and proved to be the most stirring is-sue of the evening. The subject was the schools, and a resolution offered by Mr. Charles Campbell was passed by a scant majority. It is to the effect "that the public school system of the city of Washington Is bad." Lengthy discussions were made for and against this resolution. It was claimed by many that prejudice had too strong a place in the system of the city, while others were opposed to such extreme language. The principal speaker was J. L. Akins. He stated that the resolution was none too strong, and denounced the public school system roundly. Others who

A few of these storms, however, turned to the eastward in the vicinity of Newfoundland and went out to sea. There were also a number of gales in the vicinity of the Azores at various intervals throughout February. The location and the direction of these storms are illustrated upon the chart by red lines. With Wooden Notes. Friends and invited guests of Miss which have lashed the Atlantic of late are shown in the number of new derelicts which appear upon the chart. Among them are the J. C. Hamblen, Jr., reported on February 3, 4, and 12; schooner Allen A. Mcintyre, reported January 20, and the schooner B. W. Morse, reported February 7. Besides these, seven or eight derelicts, the names of which are unknown, have been reported since January 24 in the vicinity of the United States coast line. Several old-timers, which it was hoped had disappeared, have again turned up, and they will doubtless continue to show up until the Government sends out a cruiser to till the Government sends out a cruiser to search for and sink them.

The derelict schooner Yale was again reported on February 5. Her drift has been the most remarkable of any recorded by the Hydrographic Office in some moaths. She was first sighted on October 30, in the vicinity of Hatteras. Next she was sighted on November 1, about fifty miles to the southward. Then she started out to sea, crossing the track of coasting liners, until nd other musical characters and in past and other musical characters and in pasting them on blank music paper, the notes and paper, of course, being much enlarged. Then the little pupils are taught to associate the sounds of notes on the piano with the wooden notes which they use on the table. For this purpose high and low notes are given such names as "Chickadee C," "Fly F.," and "Giant G.," the pupils being taught to distinguish between these and then those nearer middle C. It was a matter of some surprise crossing the track of coasting liners until she was several hundred miles off shore. After this journey the wreck took another turn to the southward, and when last re-ported, on February 5, she was several hundred miles off shore in a direct line with Jupiter. Fla. e C. It was a matter of some surprise observe how well the pupils of Miss syne could name the notes sounded at ndom on the plano.

hundred miles off shore in a direct line with Jupiter, Fla.

Another wanderer which is exciting the interest of mariners is the schooner Alfuretta S. Snare, which was abandoned on George's Shoal, off the New England coast, on December 9. She has pursued an erratic course, pointing at various intervals toward all quarters of the compass. She was finally sighted on February 9, going out to sea. The Snare has been seen over a dozen times in the past three months.

The bark Oxford was reported waterlogged in mid-ocean on January 9. She has not since been seen.
